WILLIAM CHRISTENBERRY TO SPEAK AT SHELTON STATE

Nationally renowned Alabama artist William Christenberry will be at Shelton on Friday, April 23, as an exhibitor and lecturer on his photographs, sculpture and drawings. Christenberry's appearance at Shelton is part of the college's Millennium celebration, a year of special events and activities planned during 1999.*

Billed as an internationally recognized interpreter of the American South, Christenberry will discuss some of the literary, philosophical and aesthetic concerns of his work. This Millennium Evening will be held in the Alabama Power Recital Hall located in the Fine Arts complex of Shelton's new Martin Campus. Christenberry's lecture will be held at 7 p.m. and is free and open to the public.

Twelve selected works of Christenberry from the permanent collection of the Sarah Moody Gallery of Art at the University of Alabama are on exhibit in the National Bank of Commerce Art Gallery at Shelton through April 30. Hours are Monday - Thursday, 10 a.m. - 10 p.m., and Friday, 10 a.m. - 6 p.m.

Christenberry was trained as an abstract expressionist painter during the 1950s. Graduating with a B.F.A. degree in 1958 from the University of Alabama, Christenberry went on to receive his MA degree in painting in 1961. From 1962 - 1968, he was assistant and associate professor of art at Memphis State University in Memphis, Tennessee. In 1968 he moved to Washington, D.C. where he is currently professor of art, Corcoran School of Art.

A native Alabamian, Christenberry was born in Tuscaloosa in 1936. Childhood summers were spent in Hale County at the farms of his grandparents on both sides of his family. Gradually Christenberry abandoned abstract painting and turned his attention to re-creating through art the world he had known as a child. Today Christenberry is closely identified with the culture and environment of his native south, specifically with the region around Hale County.

Christenberry has received numerous honors and awards during his career. In 1996 he received the University of Memphis Distinguished Achievement Award in Memory of Elvis Presley, and in 1994, he received the Art Matters grant from New York. He has also received The Alabama Prize (1989), the Mayor's Art Award, Washington, D.C. (1986), the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Fellowship (1984), Lyndhurst Foundation Prize (1982-84), Eudora Welty Professor of Southern Studies, Millsaps College (1991). In 1985 the University of Alabama honored him with the Alabama Alumni Arts Award, and in 1981 he was named a Sesquicentennial Honorary Professor at the University.

Since 1961 he has produced over 75 solo exhibits and 100 group exhibitions across the United States. His works are shown in public collections from Washington D.C. to San Francisco. His work has been commissioned by Coca-Cola, Hallmark Corporation, Montgomery Museum of Fine Arts, Philip Morris Corporation, Arnold and Porter, and U.S. General Services.

Pace Wildenstein MacGill Gallery, New York, New York; Morgan Gallery, Kansas City, Mo.; and Hemphill Gallery, Washington, D.C. represent him.

SHELTON INSTRUCTOR'S ARTICLE RECEIVES NATIONAL PUBLICATION

A recent article by Shelton instructor Fran Turner has been published in Innovation Abstracts, a national newsletter published by the National Institute for Staff and Organizational Development (NISOD), College of Education, the University of Texas at Austin.

The article, entitled "Using the newspaper to Develop Reading skills," has been distributed nationally. As a developmental reading instructor, Turner describes how she uses the newspaper to help students develop good reading skills.

As an example of her work, students work individually or as teams on a newspaper Scavenger Hunt. The items they find are cut out, labeled, and arranged in the order they appear on the list. Sample items include: transition words; the name of a state; an editorial cartoon; the name of the president, etc.

Applications are now being accepted for Fulbright Senior Scholar Awards for U.S. faculty and Professionals. Interested? Contact Joyce Jolly, ext. 2264.
